THICK LIPS ARE NOT SURE SIGNS

It Is Cruel Injustice To Dissociate Heavy Mouth With Splendid Mentality

WHAT A PSYCHOLOGIST THINKS

(By R. Abington Bruce)
It is a widespread belief that a person with thick, rolling lips is of a passionate nature, lacking in control of the animal instincts, and of somewhat deficient mental calibre. So often has this been found to be the case that the thick lip is almost universally accepted as an indication of imperfect development.

To adopt this as an unfailing rule is to work a cruel injustice in many instances.

There are plenty of thick-lipped people of splendid mentality and character, whose self-control is superior to that of many devoid of this unfavorable facial sign.

It is important to recognize, however, that in attaining this self-control one must usually have a serious handicap to overcome—the handicap, not of their thick, rolling lips, but of an internal physical condition responsible both for the thickening of the lips and the character defects that so frequently go with it.

This handicap is a development of childhood, and consists in the formation of excessive tissue—the so-called "adenoid growths"—in the cavity back of the nose. Such a formation necessarily makes it difficult to breathe through the nose, with the result that the sufferer from adenoids becomes a mouth breather.

Now, mouth breathing by keeping the mouth constantly open, causes a thickening and outward rolling of the lips.

In addition it admits air into the lungs in a way to interfere with proper respiration. As a result the whole vital activity is lowered and by the impoverishment of the blood supply, the various organs, and particularly the brain, become inadequately nourished.

Under this two-fold condition of strain and malnutrition, the brain easily tires, with consequent impairment of the power of attention, volition, and self-control.

Accordingly, unless powerful corrective influences are present in the form of an unusually careful training and an exceptionally favorable environment, the thick-lipped mouth-breather is likely to suffer both mental and moral retardation.

All this may be averted by a simple surgical operation for the removal of the adenoids, thereby permitting normal nose breathing to be resumed.

It scarcely needs to be added that any parent whose child develops mouth breathing habits is derelict in his duty if he does not have remedial measures applied.

Neglect may mean the blossoming of undesirable traits of character which all the education of later years may not wholly overcome.

PHONE CENTRAL WAS SWAMPED

Few Calls Were Answered Last Night During Burning of Temple Elevator; Official Explains Reason Therefor

Dissatisfaction was expressed this morning at the city hall with telephone service during the progress of the fire last night, which destroyed the Temple elevator. Patrols all over town were unable to get "central" at all.

"When the fire occurred the small night shift was on duty," said the official today. "Immediately every curious person in the city dashed to a phone and wanted to know immediately where the fire was. We appreciate the fact that some of these calls were necessary, and exceedingly important, but on the other hand the girls at the switch board could not tell which were important and which were not. They answered as fast as they could. We got in connection with as many of our operators as we could, at a full rate. Number of them hurried to the office via street cars, and even J. M. Noble was at a switch board. Every effort was made to meet the demand the fire came at a time when we were unable to handle the telephone service, and we can realize how it made some of our patrons indignant. The trouble is that there are so many that do not need to know where the fire is who call. Hundreds of calls coming in at once are hard to handle, and if the curious caller who is not vitally interested would stay off the line there would be no trouble."

FRATERNITY OF SOULS

Such Are Italy and France in Sister Contest Against Oppressors, Says President Poincare

PARIS, May 25.—Ramon Poincare, president of France, during a visit to the armies in Lorraine and the Vosges, sent the king of Italy the following telegram: "At this solemn hour, all France is glad to think that the two sister nations are going to fight once more for their common civilization and the freedom of oppressed peoples. Already brought near by the immortal force of the Latin genius, Italy and France will be united forever by this new fraternity of souls."

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY REPORT IS DISCUSSED

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 25.—Continuation of the discussion of the report of the special committee on Union theological seminary, presented yesterday, was the special order of business at this afternoon's session of the 127th general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States.

The early session today of the assembly was devoted to reports of the standing committees. The committee on temperance will report late today.

That Dog "Hector" Puzzles Scientists, Entertains Thousands And Is Source Of Wonder

"Hector," the dog with the human brain appearing at the Lyric theater this week, is in all probability the most widely discussed animal in the world today. The little French poodle with his inquisitive face and black eyes has been the subject of articles in practically every metropolitan newspaper and scientific magazine in the United States since his advent on the stage less than eighteen months ago.

Can dogs think? Hector even reads the mind of his master. The little en-fine prodigy also understands the meaning of 50 words, and can do problems in subtraction, addition, and multiplication. The only thing that worries his master, P. J. Tryon, by profession a mining engineer, is that people think there must be some trick connected with the marvelous performance of the dog.

"Some people will always think that a dog can only learn so much," said Tryon while giving a private exhibition today. "I myself cannot understand some of the things Hector does, such as reading my mind when I concentrate it on a number, but he learns the other things simply because he has an unusual brain for a dog, and has been properly trained."

Tryon, who is a dog fancier, got Hector as a puppy and began teaching him little tricks while engaged in his pro-

SCHOOL'S STATUS NOT DISTURBED

Tonkawa Institution Will Continue As It Has In Past—Wilson Says Politics Has Never Entered Educational Work

The state board of education took today the matter of the preparatory school at Tonkawa and voted to continue the school in the future as it has been in the past—as a preparatory school, which in all that can be done under the appropriation made by the last legislature.

"There appears to be a serious mistake as to my attitude toward the Tonkawa school," said Superintendent Wilson. "I had it in mind to make it one of the best schools in the state. The school has laid enough to be developed into more than a preparatory school, and steps were being taken to make it so, but the legislature did not act on the recommendation I made."

"I recommended to the legislature at the last session that an appropriation sufficiently large be made to develop this school. In fact the work was already under way there. The legislature did not act on the recommendation, however, and for the present the institution must remain a preparatory school."

"There is no feeling of retaliation on my part in this matter, for it is simply a matter of keeping within the appropriation made by the legislature. The question of politics has never entered into the board's control of the Tonkawa school at all. In fact no attention has been paid to political matters in that town. At the meeting today I was compelled to vote to continue the school as it has been in the past, a preparatory school."

It is proposed at some time in the future to make the Tonkawa school a much better institution than it has been in the past, according to members of the board, but it will require a large appropriation by the legislature. That was not made at the last session and according to the members of the board the work that was started in the school cannot be continued at this time.

Assistant Attorney General Wood has given an opinion that the funds appropriated by the last legislature for the maintenance and support of the Tonkawa school cannot be used for any other purpose. It was desired to repair and preserve the walls of that

5 FUNERAL SERVICES

Arranged by Actors and Actresses Who Formerly Had Starred Under Charles Frohman's Management

NEW YORK, May 25.—The funeral services of Charles Frohman, theatrical manager and producer, a Lillian Russell victim, were held here today, simultaneously with services in four other cities, arranged by actors or actresses who have starred under Mr. Frohman's management.

The services here began at the home of Daniel Frohman where only members of Charles Frohman's immediate family were present. This was followed by services in the Temple Emanuel EL.

The honorary pallbearers included 21 actors and theatrical managers. Funeral services in memory of Mr. Frohman were arranged by Blanche Burke in Tacoma, Wash., by Maudie Adams in Los Angeles, by John Brown in San Francisco, and by Julia Sanderson and others in Providence, R. I.

STUDENTS VISIT HERDS AT HOME

A. and M. Professor and Class in Animal Husbandry See Some of State's Live Stock Breeders

STILLWATER, Ok., May 25.—Professor W. L. Blizzard of the animal husbandry department of the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college, accompanied a party of senior animal husbandry students on a tour of inspection of some of the leading livestock herds of the state last week. Those making the trip were E. R. Cass, G. R. Chote, A. E. Wade and L. E. Woodward.

They visited the prize winning herd of Herefords owned by T. E. Smith of Norman. While there they were shown through the modern dairy barn of the Oklahoma Hospital company and had an opportunity to study their herd of pure bred Jerseys, many of which are imported stock. At Oklahoma City they attended a meeting of the South-west American Stock Breeders' association. At the Morris packing plant they were conducted through all departments.

At El Reno they spent some time with L. R. Patterson's herd of 175 pure bred shorthorns. At Geary, in addition to the choice specimens of the shorthorn breed out of a herd of 125 shown by A. B. Campbell they had a chance to see some excellent Poland-China hogs. They had intended to look over President Frank M. Gault's herd of Herefords, but the heavy rains had made the roads impassable.

H. C. Lookabaugh of Watonga personally conducted them over his farm and gave them the opportunity to study some of the finest specimens among his herd of over 300 shorthorns. He had on display some of his choicest Poland-China hogs. Another bunch of good shorthorns were seen on J. R. Whistler's farm, at the same place. The trip was concluded with the visit to Elmdale where the breeding establishments of J. H. Jackson and W. R. Boles were thrown open and the students had the pleasure of studying some of the finest Percherons of the southwest.

This was the first of a number of trips that Professor Blizzard is planning for the animal husbandry students. He wants to have them become acquainted with the resources of the state from the standpoint of livestock production and is taking this method of accomplishing his object. The boys say they were royally treated at every point visited.

ASSESSORS ACT AS OWN LAWYER

Attorney General Finds That Tax Fixers Assume to Pass on Any Questions of Constitutionality that Appear

County assessors throughout the state have shown a disposition to pass on the constitutionality of some acts passed by the last legislature according to correspondence brought to the attention of the governor. It has been stated that assessors in the east part of the state have insisted upon listing all the property of the oil companies except the oil itself, which is taxed under the gross production act.

The matter was referred to the attorney general, from whose office an opinion has been given to the effect that the gross production tax is in lieu of all other taxes that might be levied on an oil well on basis upon the equipment and machinery of any well producing natural gas or petroleum. The property should not be listed or assessed for the ordinary oil well taxes, the opinion states, and there is a remedy at law to prevent an oil well from being assessed for the ordinary oil well taxes when such tax has been levied.

VOLCANO RUINS TREES

Damage Caused by Activity of Lassen Peak Is Greater Than at First Thought.

REDDING, Cal., May 25.—Greater ruin was wrought by Saturday's eruption of Lassen peak than first believed, according to stories brought here today by returning investigating parties who traveled over almost impassable roads and through a raging storm to reach the edge of the danger zone.

Widespread damage to standing timber was the most evident of the new, but discovered destruction. The mud torrents and the showers of superheated rocks and boulders are reported to have ruined a million feet of timber.
